Common Date for Easter - The World Council of Churches has published a Faith and Order paper, "Towards a Common Date for Easter" as an encouragement to churches and Christians to work with one another in their own contexts for a common celebration of Easter. Fresh impetus to explore the hope of a common date for Easter comes in 2025, when all Christians will celebrate Easter on a common day. Eastern and Western churches have used different calendars to calculate the date of Easter since the 16th century, and only rarely do they coincide. The new publication contains four contributions from different church traditions on the search for a way to celebrate Easter on a common date every year that were presented at a webinar organized by the Commission on Faith and Order on "Easter 2025: Celebrating Together to Strengthen Unity." Towards a Common Date for Easter", edited by Sandra Beardsall and Martin Illert is <https://www.oikoumene.org/resources/publications/towards-a-common-date-for-easter>
